Dorian Haarhoff once again offers a 10th Temenos Retreat. The emphasis is on the Garden of the Beloved as a metaphor for our writing. How do we seed the writing? Place it where? Water it? Cultivate, graft and prune so it comes to full bloom? And so provide shade and sustenance for the reader?

Time to write, to polish, to plan, to rewrite, to receive feedback.

Temenos (a spiritual oasis) in McGregor provides an idyllic setting for such an in-depth discovery. Time to circle the garden of the beloved ... the labyrinth... communicate with peacocks and peahens ... meditate amidst blueglass... breathe... be... come and source your bliss.

creativity and imagination. He believes in the power of stories and images to build our belonging. His workshops are based on his workbook The Writer's Voice and Route 77, a Poememoir.

Your feedback always makes me realise what a writing genius you are. What beautiful beads of wisdom. (Clive Goodchild-Brown)

Dorian helps you call in the symbols, metaphors, rhythms of your life, like wild children, and bring them home. More than teaching how to write poetry, he shows how to live it. (Susan Mann, novelist).

I watch him as he bends /among the leaves and vines /to hook some weed or other/ I think of him there / raking and trimming, stirring up / those sheets of fire

(Mary Oliver on the poet Staney Kunitz)
